It's merely the season to focus on smaller, colder streams. June and July are the best fishing months of the year, IMO. The way things are shaping up this year could be just as good in August as well.

I do the big stream hatch chasing thing like everyone else, and enjoy it. But I enjoy a day on those little streams more than anything, and tis the season. Hence why IMO, June/July > April/May. Because the fishing on those streams is better.

And the air temperature isn't so bad when you're standing in 55 degree water.
