With today's technology, it much easier than when I started. If you have a smart phone, save the stream flow gauges to your favorites. Next time you are there, look at the cfs and relate it to you wading comfort level. Jump down to the other gauge and see how that flow suits you. Very quickly you can put a number on what you deem "fishable" by a quick glance at the cfs. It's a whole lot mote user friendly than driving 3 hours hoping that it's fishable.
