SMB over 12" and SMB over 15" are on a high right now in the Delaware from Easton to Yardley as compared to the 11 yr averages between 1989 and 1999, inclusive. I chose that 11 yr period because that is the period for which the data were most readily available. It is the number of SMB less than 12" that are down to about half of the avg for those yrs. Reason: avg to poor yr classes in recent yrs related to weather conditions during and after spawning. It has nothing to do with predators!!!!
