Look, we could all be out west facing 120+ degree weather. When I was out there just last week it reached 106 twice.

Do not "kid yourself" with "there is a difference between dry heat and humidity heat" - when it gets this hot (100+) your either baking or boiling and both are methods of cooking you. anyways - Take extra water with you on any adventure.

That's the truth...Some years ago I was golfing in Las Vegas and the temps were 112....hot is hot! But it did get down to the mid-nineties at night
