Fredrick,

I assume by "bass fly" you meant the popper. When I first started fishing for bass, I would take poppers and try them, I never caught anything right away so I changed flies. The result was never catching fish on the popper. When I finally decided I wanted to catch bass on the popper, the only flies I took with me were poppers. This forced me to find a way to catch fish on the popper or get skunked. Harry Murry's book "Fly Fishing Techniques for Smallmouth Bass" was very helpful too. Give it a try. It's great fun, and if you tie on a bead head nymph as a dropper you'll be catching blue gill as a bonus. I've also had some nice bass take the dropper.
