

---

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Another question about cicadas...blah blah blah!

Re: Another question about cicadas...blah blah blah!

Author: : wgmiller

Date: : 2013/7/4 13:18:40

URL:

Quote:

troutbert wrote:

Clarks Creek is very slow moving and if everybody and his brother is pounding Clarks, the fish might be pickier though.

There must be some other streams, maybe some with smallmouth and/or carp where the cicadas are on.

Couldn't agree more about Clarks being a slower stream. The fish there have some time to inspect your offering.

The heaviest concentration of this brood seems to be northeast of Harrisburg along the Blue Mountain line. I'd love to find some warmwater action because I'm sure hooking up with a bass or carp on a cicada pattern would be a blast. That opportunity is quickly fading though as it appears their reign is ending.

I'm starting to see pictures of annual cicada nymphs emerging, so soon we'll hear their noise. They certainly don't offer anywhere near the same opportunity as the 17-year brood though.