fish are not tippet shy. They're drag shy. If they can see 6X, they can see 8X.
7X - not really necessary

Most of the time.

As for not being able to see the fly, there's several options. Try dropping the small fly off of a larger, more visible pattern.

The indicator fly technique will often produce more drag - call it micro drag if you want, but drag is drag. I use this technique only in fast and deep riffles where big fish often feed in heavily pressured areas. Learn to see your fly when fishing flat water and it will pay big dividends.
