Several years ago I encountered some renegades with fish on a stringer during a non-harvest period. They played dumb when I told them they couldn't keep fish. Not sure I've ever seen someone bait fishing. Lots of spin fishing which is allowed of course.

Trash has actually been better in recent years although much of what you see must wash down from Lebanon. Usually it's household waster like empty laundry detergent bottles.

I'm not sure they stock as many browns in there as they used to. When the summer time terrestrial fishing was very good it was always brown trout. As I think about it, I had really good dry fly fishing in early fall too with beetles, ants and smaller caddis. Recall one afternoon when I could hear the AC high school football game going on while I was fishing.
