It will catch fish. Sometimes the more 'buggy' a fly looks, take that to mean what you will, the better. Trout don't know what the proper proportions and materials are for a Royal Wulff. If we're going to be technical, the link provided doesn't even spell the name of the fly correctly. 😊

None of this is meant to disrespect doing it as per the original recipe and 'accepted' visual. The fact of the matter is that if fly tiers didn't change things up a bit now and then flies like the Royal Wulff wouldn't exist.

If it floats and you're happy with it you're good to go. If I was a trout I'd probably go for it.
