

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : CDC Trico Comparadun

Re: CDC Trico Comparadun

Author: : afishinado

Date: : 2013/7/6 7:20:43

URL:

Foremost is what Heritage Ed stated about not harming the fish.

To add, I often see FFers, especially beginners, thinking the lighter the tippet the better (less visibility and/or less drag). They often use it as a crutch when proper casting and mending with proper leader design is what they should strive for, instead tying on lighter and lighter tippets. They usually end up with broken tippet and broken knots on fish or on the bottom (when nymphing) as well as twisted tippets trying to cast flies way too big for their light tippet. Not to mention inaccurate casts because of their inability to turn over their fly with a light tippet.

This subject comes up every summer. Groundhog Day