I agree with the idea of taking him for bluegills if there are no cold trout waters in your area. But, if a trout stream is there, drop a nymph from a dry fly, and tell him to hang on. That worked with my granddaughter, and she can now fish dries efficiently -- when she can take time from her other tweenage activities to fish. (Don't yell at your friend: my granddaughter told me this spring one evening that if I yelled again, the outing was over. I kept my mouth pretty much shut the rest of the evening.)
