so after a bit of googling i've seen different posts talking about gauges, how different gauges have different lengths for the same size hooks and so forth.

then i also saw one of the google finds was from a book, didnt see which book just found what i was looking for. that book stated $\frac{3}{4}$ of the hook shank. this seems like a good start point. another find stated 1.5x the hook gap.

what do you guys go by?

thanks again to all for your knowledge!
