

---

Subject: : Hatch and Entomology Forum

Topic: : Bug Info

Bug Info

Author: : Foxgap239

Date: : 2013/7/8 9:57:30

URL:

Not sure if this post belongs here or in the hatch forum, if it belongs there, Mods feel free to move it. Thanks.

We was fishing a Lehigh Valley Limestoner yesterday for the trico hatch. We nymphed our way up to where I like to fish trico dries. Saw the trico cloud in the sky and fish already rising pretty steadily. I'm not talking about a few fish, I'm talking about 15 or 20 fish per pool. We started fishing tricos and I got 1 small wild brown on like the third cast. I then proceeded to fish over consistently rising fish only to have them snub my fly time after time after time. I finally looked down at the water and saw spinners floating by but when I picked one up I was amazed to see it was like a size 28 or even a 30. Does anyone have any idea what they might have been? I'm thinking the fish were keyed on them until the tricos did fall when I was able to get two more.