I had to take a long drive to day and decided to take a thermometer along. I stopped at three creeks along the way to check water temperatures (didn't fish). All three were in the 66-68 deg F range. These were freestone mountain creeks. I'm thinking these creeks are up over 70 downstream, once they roll in to farm land and town settings. Water levels were medium low. The rain we've had lately seems to have helped keep the creeks in decent fishing condition.
