sipe,

I can't really say that it is more effective than a wooly bugger. Murray's original pattern called for unpainted dumbbell eyes. I used red because that is what I had on hand. I have resorted to putting red dumbbell eyes on almost all my buggers. I also have replaced the marabou tail with rabbit strip tails. I really like the red dumbbell eyes and they way those flies ride hook up when they are tied this way. And yes, I do think the red eyes catch some attention.
