I'm not sure if it's been added yet to the Nat. Repro list yet. All I'll say is it's in the Anthracite coal region. Things brookies eat in those streams are in many cases terrestrials, other fish(brookies), and aquatic insects if there are any. This stream had some. Other streams in the region have been being monitored for some time and the brookies have been found with stomachs full of aphids, millipedes, hoppers, and other terrestrials.
