mikephl,

It might of been my brother posting about Lawn Lake on paradise website, we spent a good amount of time in RMNP and wrote up a few blog posts on our excursions. I highly recommend trekking up to Lawn Lake, the fishing was fantastic and the scenery was even better. In my opinion the best time to go out west is September, the daily thunderstorms that usually happen go away and the evening temperatures are perfect for pitching a tent in the high country. The biggest advantage going after Labor Day is the crowds die down tremendously and you can enjoy the waters with less people. The Hopper action was still fantastic at that time of year also.
