The Underwater World of Trout, Vol 1, Discovery, 57 minutes.

The Underwater World of Trout, Vol 2, Feeding Lies, 67 minutes.

These are currently available on Dailymotion in full versions and in a fairly good resolution (480p). Unlike various illegal Youtube uploads of copyrighted material, these seem to be legal and legitimate and perhaps temporary. I can only presume a licensing fee has been paid in order to do this.

Wild and stocked trout and their interactions are shown, as well as various current and water clarity conditions, modes of hiding and rest, feeding patterns, and much more.

I found these enjoyable and will at the very least think a little differently about how I approach a number of different aspects of angling for trout.

Some of the observations and statements may be debated from a scientific standpoint, but they are attributed should a naysayer wish to investigate further.

With temperatures pushing the mid-90's this week, not a bad way to vicariously experience the stream. These are the links:
