

---

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Valley Creek Surprise 7-14-13

Re: Valley Creek Surprise 7-14-13

Author: : Swattie87

Date: : 2013/7/15 18:02:25

URL:

It's not typical to see LM in a stream like Valley...that fish is a rogue. I wouldn't worry about the Trout in Valley...being eaten by Bass anyway.

Stream LM are most often found in my experience in PA in the immediate downstream areas of impoundments on WW streams. You'll find them for a few hundred yards below the dam mixed in with Smallies and then they fade out to all Smallies as you get further downstream of the dam. I attribute this to fry or fingerlings getting washed down the spillway. LM are much more adverse to current than SM, although they seem to do ok in the big spillway pools at the bottom of dams.