I sweated my ass off last week looking and fishing for carp. I've been doing a lot of research lately too on the subject. I went to streams where there were no carp then I found some carp then I lost some carp that I hooked. I finally got into some and had a blast. More people need to explore and research. There is so much info on the internet about carp and fly fishing its ridiculous. Get out there and explore and try different patterns and tippet size. You'll figure it out and the reward will be that much better.
