Agree Tups. The cool thing is that over the last month, the rains have removed almost all the dams and restored all pf the plunge pools. I told my buddy the other day when I got back, "She looks like a trout stream again." I'm anxious to see how the fish redistribute. I have a great photo record of the big fish in this stream. They have stayed in pretty much the same areas for the last 3 years. This will shuffle the deck.

Wasn't the pool deeper when the LWD jam was in place?

Why do you think this is better, when the pool appears to be much shallower?
