

Subject: : Hatch and Entomology Forum

Topic: : Bug Info

Re: Bug Info

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2013/7/17 7:26:29

URL:

Could they have been smaller tricos? I fish a 24 or 26 for tricos because, well, it's easier. But many naturals are 28's. Could have been a male/female thing. Males are all black and hatch earlier, they may fall earlier too. Couple that with really selective fish, and well....

My other guess would be some sort of very small BWO, most in various genus's of the Baetis family. Some are more blackish than olive...