I think the stations are a great idea mainly to spread the awareness. The first time I ever heard of Didymo was at a TCO up by the Ausable. I was only 15 or so (6 years ago) and I remember seeing a washing station outside of their store. It was a bucket of a solution and a piece of printer paper with a picture of rock snot with a brief description explaining the terrors.

Worked for me, because that image is burned into my brain. Not saying that I haven't fished a new stream with wet/untreated gear...but I do think about it 100% more than I would have before. I'd probably still have felt soles that I store in my dark garage if it weren't for that sign.
