

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : 8lb bass uncatchable?

Re: 8lb bass uncatchable?

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2013/7/19 14:36:48

URL:

I concur on using a small sunnie as bait. You know where he is, so get it in there without letting him see you first.

If that doesn't work, make a point to observe the fish, if you can. It is likely, when under those roots, and not being interested in a sunny, that he is hiding and NOT feeding. He may only feed at certain times of the day or something. Maybe even night. And when he does, he likely moves out of there and takes up a feeding position elsewhere. You gotta figure out when that happens, and where he goes.