

---

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Little J Float Trip

Re: Little J Float Trip

Author: : PennKev

Date: : 2013/7/19 18:39:28

URL:

You probably won't have much trouble floating it in a kayak regardless of flow. In fact, that may be the ideal craft to float from spot to spot. However, you probably want flows above 150 CFS. Not sure how it will work out if you plan to fish while floating.

For fishing, flows around 200-250 CFS are ideal but it can fish well down to 100 CFS or so, but that is getting pretty low. Wading is increasingly difficult as you get above 250 CFS. 350 CFS is about my limit for wading the LJR. I fished the lower river once when it was slightly above 400 and it was very difficult and many spots were out of reach.

Kev