DEfLY,

Welcome to PAFF. Participation in threads isn't mandatory, but to get full enjoyment of a forum such as this, you have to participate on some level or other posters cannot really get to know you. We are more than our biographies.

As for disposing of your excess material, you can use the swap forum, or Craigslist or eBay if you primarily wish to sell. I would use eBay, because you can ship tying material cheap and that market will be much larger than our swap forum.

Another idea, if you were so inclined is to look for a way to give some of it away, such as making several small kits for a beginner and finding people new to the sport and art who might be forever grateful for a small variety of items that might give them a start in the practice.
