

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Targetting smallies amid sunfish

Targetting smallies amid sunfish

Author: : mikesl

Date: : 2013/7/20 19:52:38

URL:

Hi all

I have a great little warmwater stream fishing hole near my house... absolutely packed with redbreast sunnies and bluegill. like hundreds.... splash a popper down and you can;t count to 3 before it gets hit hard.

They provide plenty of enterntainment for me and the kids, and are fun to catch ... to a point.

I have suspected for some time, and confirmed today that there are some decent smallmouth in this same water. level was low and i was wet wading it and saw them cruising past.

I tried a few things today (mostly clouser type crawdad) but just can't get the smallies to take an interest in anything i throw their way, and the sunnies hit everything so aggressively anyway that it is nearly moot.

Any tips for times of day, presentation, fly/streamer types likeley to target the smallies over the sunnies?

Also a nice carp in this area too.... for what its worth.

will take non-flyfishing recommendations inbto consideration as well 😊