I remember fishing it in the early 60s when they opened the heritage stretch. .There was a cable bridge at the head of the kiddie pool. A lot of the stream improvements have washed away or are silted in so you can barely see them unless you remember them from before. There was also a lot of vegetation and the hatches were better than they are now, although it looks like they are slowly coming back. You could keep 1 trout 20" or larger. IT ended at the fireman's bridge (the one below the fly shop).

I remember 2 guys fishing there, 1 above the bridge and 1 below , the guy above was catching trout and killing them and letting them float to the guy below. The rest of the story is , the warden was watching them from above and when they had a few he nabbed them.
