Is netting them with one of those musky net/baskets (not sure what theyre called) hard? It seems like it would be tough

I'm guessing you're talking about a cradle?

I haven't used one personally so take this for what its worth...I've read they take some practice getting used to the motion (i figured this much). But I've also heard its impossible to use one without a fishing partner (makes sense assuming you still have a rod in your hand). I imagine it's even tougher on a boat when someone is responsible for controlling the boat at the same time.

At any rate, some guys swear by them...if you can make the setup work, I'd say give it a shot.
