Andy,

There were some pseudos but not many where we were fishing. The sulphurs were ridiculously small. I did do ok on a size 20 and i did actually tie some 22s last year and caught a fish on one. My biggest fish (20.5 inches) came on a size 16 sulphur dun during a blanket size 20/22 hatch. We did see a few bigger sulphurs and occassionally fish eating them when they came done.

These were the pickiest eaters I came across in my years of fishing down there. I did manage a few nymphing in the mornings which was fun. The hatching is still going strong and hopefully more fish work the bugs because there was a lot of 1 and done rises too which was frustrating. Now that the flow is consistent maybe the fish will stay in their lanes and feed more regular.

Good luck and you should do well nymphing. I did get one take on an Iso as well.
