I would say, if they are an hourly employee give them a nice tip, if they are a private guide, maybe a bit less. and of course depends on the service they give you as well. they may not be able to get you a fish, based on how the fish are feeding that day, bt if the person is giving you loads and loads of helpful info even on a skuk day i'd still say it's worth it to tip.

and back to the private guide, i think a better tip would be a good recommendation to anyone who wants to know. as is said you give a guy good service, he may tell a friend, but bad service and everyone hears about it.
