If a guide shows you an awesome time on a river that you aren't familiar with, shares stories, works hard to get you on fish, teaches you something and/or helps you with your casting, tip the guy.

If he sits there like a turd, doesn't talk and is miserable, you still toss him a few bucks.

The harder they work for the client, the better tip should be. This is coming from a person that all but refuses to hire a guide. If I can't figure it out some day, I might have to get a guide.
