

---

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Guide Tipping

Re: Guide Tipping

Author: : PatrickC

Date: : 2013/7/24 10:26:11

URL:

Quote:

PennypackFlyer wrote:

Sorry if I bust on you Patrick, You did not tip him, you paid for the extra service he was providing called child care. You are fortunate that this worked out as well as it did for YOU, and that the guide had that kinda patience. My praise goes to the guide. As for you, you did not talk about the fish your daughter caught. Your post above is about ME..ME...ME...read it again if you don't believe me. She may remember that day as "the day dad dumped me onto some guide" so he could catch fish. I KNOW I'VE BEEN THERE...AND MY DAUGHTER HATES ALL FISHING. I was to blind to see what was important to her in an outing. If I could turn back time...if only.....

This does however bring up an important question of how old should a child be before they share in the experience of guided trips?

Oh, you must have been in the boat with me and observed us all day. You should probably get to know me a little better before making ignorant remarks like that. I spent the day photographing my daughter with her fish and helping her land fish and yes, I hammered a few smallies myself. In fact, my daughter caught way more fish than I did yesterday. Maybe you could try asking more questions before making silly assumptions in the future. My apologies for not wording my post to your expectations.