Looks like I'm in trouble now.

In all fairness to da Fox, his soaking was due to yet another epic faceplant - all in the name of field testing his new waders. They worked much better when not submerged upside down.

Andy - you'll find plenty of food left if you get there at 1:30. The tricos will be long gone, but ants and beetles fished tight to the bank areas with overhanging vegetation will produce. Scuds and cressbugs also work great anytime as well.

Just a guess, but there'll likely be some instruction going on as long as people want it. We'll work Old Lefty until everyone gets some personalized casting instruction, and there'll be knot instruction, leader building instruction, and a session on how to fight and land fish. Any other topics will also be addressed by request.

There should be plenty of opportunities for newbies to get some on-stream time with an experienced fisherman helping them.
