Yeah, from what I've seen, guide rates here are very little over cost. i.e. they're take-home money is tips. These guys aren't making great money on this.

Again, I don't like that system. I'd be ok with a bit of a tip as an incentive. But if 15% is the low end, drop dead expectation, then why in the world isn't that 15% just included in the price? Then no tip is required for average service. For good service, throw 5 or 10%.

In restaurants, we already do that with large groups. That should be the standard for ALL groups, and in other services, like guiding, as well.

But, even if it doesn't make sense to me, the system is what it is. I understand that the guide makes little money without tip. I understand that an absolute minimum of 15% is just expected. I don't dislike guides, they're just pricing it the way everyone else does, else they'd look overpriced. And I'm not an a-hole, so I do as I should, and tip.
