There is plenty of catch and release in hunting as in letting animals go that you don't want to take. Having them dead to rights and letting them walk is actually less stressful to an animal than fighting a fish for your own enjoyment and then letting it go. It could be argued that catch and release fishing is nothing but a way to torment fish for no reason other than our own amusement.

To those who would look down on hunting because it's a blood sport and argue that fishing isn't the same (it is) keep feeding the ammunition to PETA. They'll be coming after you next for the reasons I stated above.
