As far as habitat improvements.

Let's start with fixing all the legacy sediment banks to stop the massive erosion going on. Remove some of the one billion pounds of silt and actually add some real habitat.

You could fill a landfill with phosphorus and nitrate laden dirt.

A place for the fish to hide from birds wouldn't hurt either.

I've fished all its tribs and walked its entire length. Donegal is a sick limestone spring. But hey by all means chalk it full of foreign trout, ponder their disappearance and just stop raising fingerlings. Why do it on a good stream.
