I've been itching for a week to share this story. This is a good place. My buddy and I were fishing a brown trout stream last week that has reports of 29 & 30" browns every year. We were standing across from a large wood pile. A sparrow landed on an upper branch and worked it's way down to a branch that was 1/2 submerged in the water. The sparrow dips down to drink and BOOM...a big brown exploded on the thing. It must have seen him coming because the sparrow escaped, but it was pretty awesome to see. Now you know why Pat Cohen spins up those awesome deer hair sparrows.

I know, not a brook trout...but brookies are just as voracious.
