

---

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Big native!

Re: Big native!

Author: : Chaz

Date: : 2013/7/29 18:42:40

URL:

Quote:

wildtrout2 wrote:

Chaz, you're a funny guy. lol The stream where I saw this trout is not stocked, and I was 3 miles from the nearest road. I have caught lots of natives on this stream, quite a few of these have been posted in the "fish photos" forum. I know a native when I see one, and this brookie looked EXACTLY like every other one I've ever caught on this stream, except MUCH larger than anything I've seen before. Also, this fish was only 10 feet away when I first saw it turn, giving me a perfect view in order to positively identify it. Believe me Chaz, it was a native. I'm well aware of how rare a native of this size is, as I mentioned in my OP.

Not funny, just cantankorous 😞 It's an obvious question. I've caught stockies miles from the stocking point, in Kettle Creek and other creeks up that way. And while I didn't say, I caught a fish recently in a stream that as far as I know hasn't been stocked in anyones lifetime on the board , that could have been stocked. Really we should try to meet up sometime when we're both up that way.