Thanks McSneek, I was ecstatic to catch those two nice bass. The photo doesn't do the larger one justice, but it was a personal best smallie on any gear for me, much less a fly rod. It was the best day i've had on the lower susq in a long time. I also caught 1 very healthy looking 8 inch bass and my dad caught one just like it. I'd assume the little guys are 2nd yr fish. I was very happy to see healthy small bass, because the past few years most of the little guys i've seen have had sores.

It was great to have a little bit of optimism restored about the bass in the lower susq. Assuming we can get through august without too much drought+heat, I think the water conditions this year will be good for yoy survival too.
