

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Backpack?

Re: Backpack?

Author: : Swattie87

Date: : 2013/7/30 12:27:06

URL:

I assume you mean you intend to carry your gear to the stream without a car correct? And hence the need for a backpack?

If that's the case then I agree you're probably looking at some type of larger backpacking backpack based on the amount of space the boots and waders will take up. If you have a long walk, a pack with a frame (internal or external) will be more comfortable and distribute the weight better...many good options for around $100 or less on Sierra Trading Post for these. If you're walking though, another (somewhat obvious, but free!) option is to just wear the boots and waders...easier to wear them than carry them IMO. Besides, college girls dig guys in chest waders...especially camo ones.

If you have a car, or have access to a car then I'd scrap the backpack/bag idea entirely. Just get a large tupperware bin with a lid...way cheaper and can just hose it out when it gets dirty...which it will, quickly. Even if you can't park close to your dorm, just park for a minute, throw the 4 way flashers on and run the bin inside.