The PFBC request to not return the captured flatheads was cancelled about two years ago when, as evidenced by flathead population growth in the Susquehanna and Schuylkill, it was clear that harvest was not making an impact.

By the way, as I recently pointed out, there is nothing to support the notion that flatheads have been harming the Schuylkill R smallmouth population that could not be better supported by the evidence of habitat degradation and resulting limited reproductive success. Where habitat is good for reproduction and fingerling nurseries, we still have substantial fair to good reproductive success despite the location being within the stretch of high flathead abundance (Bridgeport).
