

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : finally get to have a brookie adventure

Re: finally get to have a brookie adventure

Author: : FarmerDave

Date: : 2013/8/1 9:01:31

URL:

Interesting discussion. I never paid much attention to the spots and not that I think of it., I don't remember ever catching native brook trout east of the divide unless you count Connecticut and to me those looked about the same.

I had however noticed differences in coloration of trout in certain drainage. For example, I know of one Clarion River trib where the orange sides are more of a pinkish, almost a deep fuchsia color. the forest around it was dominated with hemlock.

I would guess the fish in the OP were from a different stream for a couple reasons.

1. Different coloration.
2. The stream I was talking about is posted. Or at least it was, and likely still is. I used to sneak in there decades ago.

If I were to guess on the OPS stream, I'd guess that his stream is actually a trib of a trib of the Clarion. I'm not saying anything else and if I was right, it was just a very lucky guess. 😊