+1 to J's post.

Spend 30 minutes closing the distance on a good fish only to line him on the first cast. You then wait 20-30 minutes and he starts feeding again. You drag your fly across his feeding lane. He's back down for 30 minutes. He starts feeding again but has moved much further out so you exit the river, cross the riff and get into position. You've lost another 45 minutes of daylight. Can't get him to take your sulphur because he's switched to #22 psuedos. Fun, fun, fun
