I'll check it out if i'm ever in the area but not really a destination. At least it will be better than the regular Dick's stores out there.

There's too much variability in them right now. If you ever go to South Hills Village, they have a good selection of fly tying materials and even the "buy-a-fly" by the cup selection. Then you go to the store in Monroeville or Pittsburgh Mills, and you can't even find a fly tying hook.

I know that South Hills Village is in a nicer demographic, but I'd think they'd have some middle ground of fly fishing/fly tying selection...
