PENZZZ,

Pain is subsiding on a daily basis. Nights are still a bit rough and right after PT and following day. I only take the oxy right after PT and maybe that night to get sleep. Just a nasty, nasty drug. I'm pretty sure that is a project that God and the Devil worked together on.... The Poppy plant! Double edged sword for certain. It would blow to have to be on a drug like that all the time for chronic pain. It's getting better everyday but I know I have a long way to go as far as range of motion and strength. Thanks for giving me the info that you have. As far as it being a tough time of year to do this. Well, I kind of figured that there was no good time to do without 100% use of my arm for 6/7/8 months. Just do it now and get it over with. Thanks again for your knowledge and insight on the matter. I'll keep you posted.
