Afisinado: Good advice on going "small". The deep water, above the dam requires it. When I see the fish rise fast, stop, look at the fly and drop back down, I know I have the right one, but need to go one smaller.

I met a gentleman standing by the YB, at the picnic table one evening. He started telling me how to know when the white fly hatch was about to start. The next day I was glancing at a book about fishing midges and realized I had been talking to Ed Koch himself. Bought the book and am glad I did. 😊
