Agreed. Tough times for fly shops. Many FFers choose to buy their rods and tackle and flies online, and shop for fly tying materials at craft stores. Purchasing a few flies and tippet spool or two isn't enough to keep most fly shops open.

Keep in mind, the prices of the major companies that sell rods and reels and waders and boots are the same whether you buy it online or at a shop. Next time you need a rod or tackle, try going to your local fly shop to see what they have....test cast a rod....strap on a pack....clamp on a reel....try on a pair of waders.

There are many decent fly shops still left in PA. Make an effort to support them. You may find that the local shop will give you a good price as well as good service, good advice and will stand behind the products they sell. Can't get all that from the click and ship virtual guys.
