Alot depends on the lighting. Bright sun - darker the shades - amber works good for early morning and late evening and even overcasted days. Some colors will highlight the colors of the fish, or background making the fish easier to detect. Alot of it is personal choice, and what looks cool on ya.

I mainly use mine to see the creekchannels and watch where I'm steping. Normally if I can see the fish - the fish can see me as well. So once I come upon a fish, I'll back downstream out of their line of sight.
