Since my earlier posts, I actually now have a smart phone! I did buy this app last night. It was $20 something in the Play store.

Looks ok, again, I'd love the natural repro list. Without that, it's not really a great way to search for new streams. But nice to have the regs handy, and be able to look at USGS topos seamlessly. Plus the interest level to see what's around on non-fishing trips when you haven't done the homework.

I'm still figuring out how to use it. Seems intuitive enough but a little clunky at points. For instance, the map background keeps bringing up satellite view, before switching over to my choice. I can choose road map, or more often USGS topo, which is really cool. But it wants to load that satellite image before switching. Every time I pan around, it's wait, here comes the satellite pic, ok, now switch over to topo!

In my house on wifi, that's fine. But on the road, that's gonna kill my data usage goals!

Overall, though, these are my gripes but it's a good app. Better than most. Really good for those who aren't looking to find the off the radar places but instead fish the known and popular spots. But even for us small stream guys it'll have it's place.
